PREFACE.

Kannaḍa or Karnāṭaka, less correctly styled Canarese, Kanarese, or Carnatic, is "the principal language of Mysore and the adjoining parts of Coimbatore, Salem, Anantapur, and Bellary. The frontier line thence goes northwards, through the dominions of His Highness the Nizam, as far as Bidar, where it turns almost due west on to about the 78th degree, and, further, southwards so as to include the south-eastern portion of Jat and Daphlapur. Kanarese is also spoken in the extreme south-east of Satara, in Taluka Ṭasgaon; to some extent in the Aundh State of the Satara Agency; and in the south of Belgaum, and, further to the west, in Kolhapur, almost so far west as the town of Kolhapur. The line then turns southwards, following the Ghats to about Honawar, where it goes down to the sea. In North Kanara Kanarese is the official language all over the district. It is the principal language of South Kanara, with the exception of the southernmost corner. The frontier line thence coincides with the southern frontier of Mysore. Kanarese dialects are also spoken in the Nilgiris, and the language has, lastly, been brought by immigrants to Madura and to the Central Provinces" (Linguistic Survey of India, vol. 4, pp. 362–3). The word Kannaḍa, which from very ancient times has been applied both to the country and the language of its inhabitants,* is of very doubtful origin; its doublet, Karnāṭa or Karnāṭaka, seems to be the result of an attempt to find a Sanskrit etymology at all costs.†

Like the Tamil, the Kannada language possesses an ancient and rich literature. Of its earliest period, reaching down to the end of the 7th century, when the language was in the stage known later as pūrvada haḷa-gannada, or "Primitive Old Kannada," no works have survived. The second is the classical period, the age of haḷa-gannada, or "Old Kannada," which ended about the 14th century. To this belongs the oldest surviving monument of Kannada, the Kavi-rāja-mārga. Until the middle of the 12th century most of the classical writers were Jains; we may mention Pampa, Ranna, Nāga Varma, Nāga-chandra, Aggaḷa, Nēmi-chandra, Janna, Kēṣi-rāja, and Āṇḍayya. After them came a series of Śaiva poets, among the earliest of whom were Hari-hara Dēva, Rāghavāṅka, and Sōmēśvara. About the 14th century begins the period of the "Modern Kannada," hosa-gannaḍa.

Badaga, i.e. the "Northern" language, in which are written one or two books included in this Catalogue, is merely an archaic dialect of Kannada, and is spoken,

* It is estimated on the basis of the Census of 1901 that Kannada is spoken by 10,319,447 persons (Linguistic Survey, vol. 4, p. 364).

† The usually accepted derivation is from Kar-nāḍu or Kan-nāḍu, the "black region," referring to the black cotton soil of trappean character found in a large part of the Kannada country.

according to the census of 1901, by 34,229 persons, chiefly Badagas resident in the Nilgiris.

The Kurg or Coorg language (properly Kodagu) is spoken, according to the latest census, by 39,148 natives of the province of Coorg. It has affinities on the one hand to Old Kannada and on the other to Tulu and Malayalam. Like Badaga, it is still almost without a literature.

In preparing the following catalogue the same methods have generally been followed as were observed in the recent Catalogue of Tamil Books. Thus the heading LAKSHMĪṢA, Dēvapurada Aṇṇama, denotes that this author was son of Aṇṇama, of Dēvapura. It may be remarked that the Dravidian order of names, which gives successively (1) the name of the native town or tribe, (2) the father's name, and (3) the person's own name, is in North Kanara and in some adjoining districts superseded by the Marathi mode, in which this order is completely reversed.

The following is the scheme of transliteration which has been adopted:—

ಅ a	ಐ ai	ಞ ña	ಣ ṇa	ಮ ma
ಆ ā	ಒ o	ಚ cha	ತ ta	ಯ ya
ಇ i	ಓ ō	ಛ chha	ಥ tha	ರ ra

ಎ e	ಗ ga	ಡ ḍa	ಬ ba	ಹ ha
ಏ ē	ಘ gha	ಢ ḍha	ಭ bha	ಳ ḷa

The extremely rare ೡ (ḷṛi) and ೣ (ḷṛī), and the obsolete letters ಀ (ḥ, the jihvāmūlīya sibilant breathing), ಁ or ಂ (the upadhmānīya sound, corresponding to the Tamil ಫ, ṟa), and ಽ (the sound commonly written la, corresponding to the Tamil ಱ), do not occur among the titles transliterated in the present Catalogue. The abbreviation ಮುಂ is used to denote our "etcetera."

In conclusion I offer my sincere thanks to Dr. J. F. Fleet, I.C.S. (Retd.), and to Mr. R. Narasimhachar, Officer in charge of Archaeological Researches in Mysore, for philological and bibliographical help; to the Superintendent of the Basel Mission Press in Mangalore, who has communicated much information respecting the publications of his press and their authors; and to Mr. H. F. Moule, who lent me advance proofs of the Kannada section in his catalogue of the British and Foreign Bible Society's library.

From the ungrammatical title-page, it would seem that Kumāra Vyāsa's real name was believed to be Nāran'-appa. He is sometimes said to have been a village accountant of Gadag, and dedicated bks. 1-10 to Vīra-nārāyaṇa. Bks. 11-18, dedicated to Krishṇa Dēva Rāya, son of Narasa Dēva Rāya, were added by Veṅkaṭa Timmappa.

[Apratima-vīra-charitam. This author was son of Alakiya Singarārya (Saumya Nrisimha), a favourite of Maharaja Dodda Dēva Rāja (reigned 1659-72), and was born about 1645. He became a friend and finally chief minister of Chika Dēva (reigned 1672-1704), and died 1706. Besides the present works and some Sanskrit compositions, he also wrote a Chika-dēva-rāya-sataka and Karnāṭaka-kirttanegaḷu; and the Sachchhūdrādhikāra-nirṇaya (in Sanskrit), Gīta-gōpāla, and Chika-dēva-rāya-binnapa are probably by him, although ascribed to Chika Dēva.
